

Call for Papers: Esports Legal Wiki

We are delighted to introduce the Esports Legal Wiki (<https://esportslegal.wiki>), an initiative of Esports Legal News (<https://esportslegal.news>), designed to become the preeminent scholarly resource for legal issues in the esports industry. Launched to bridge the gap between legal theory and practice within this rapidly evolving field, the Esports Legal Wiki aims to provide thorough, academically rigorous, and accessible legal definitions and analyses that cater to both practitioners and scholars.

As we approach our official launch in April 2024, the Wiki already boasts approximately 60 entries, contributed by practitioners from renowned law firms such as Saul Ewing LLP, Advant Beiten, Lewis Silkin, esports-focused legal boutiques, the Swiss Esports Federation, and distinguished academics. To further expand our repository and continue our mission, we invite contributions from senior students, early career professionals, established professionals, and scholars to contribute to the Esports Legal Wiki.

Call for Contribution

We seek well-researched, detailed entries that elaborate on legal terms pertinent to esports. Each entry should be at least 500 words, ideally more, and include citations in OSCOLA format. These contributions should not only define terms but also provide deep contextual analysis, case law, and further links enhancing the utility and reach of the Wiki.

Eligibility and Submission Details

- We welcome submissions from senior students, early career professionals, established professionals, and scholars with a passion for esports law.
- Proposals should include a detailed outline of the entry and a sample of previous scholarly work.

Benefits of Contributing

- Contributors will establish themselves as thought leaders at the intersection of law and esports.
- Each contribution will be credited, enhancing visibility within both academic and professional circles.
- Contributors will join a network of leading legal professionals and academics, fostering professional growth and collaboration.

Please send your entry proposals and writing samples to ishmatenko@esportslegal.news, dfarmaki@esportslegal.wiki, and takaze.turner@esportslegal.news by 30 June 2024. Ensure your submissions detail the specific legal terms you aim to define and the analytical approach you will employ.

We are excited about your participation in defining and shaping the legal framework of esports. Your expertise will undoubtedly contribute to the success and reliability of the Esports Legal Wiki.

We Value Diversity: The Esports Legal Wiki is committed to diversity and inclusiveness. We encourage applications from individuals of all backgrounds, which enriches our community and improves our collective insight into the esports legal landscape.

